It is in the same project in the same folder where I have my image folder. I have this path But my access is denied. A: You should add a directory in the "Properties" section of your project. This is a path to the physical directory in your web app where the images reside. Q: can't map mysql database in eclipse to android project i installed MySQL workbench for eclipse but in my android project the database is missing in the folder mnt/data/mydatabase. and also when i click on the mnt/data/mydatabase, it is showing a message cannot find the file. what should i do? Its the default path of your MySQL database while you did set database path as "/data/data/your_application_package/databases/". It is the location of your database file(.frm file). As a developer you will access to your MySQL database. For that you need to create folder in your project in which you will have all your database tables. Means that path of your database will be your_project_path/databases/database_name. If you have other database in the application make sure that you have select database connection in your AndroidManifest.xml file of your application in the
